Dissertation

Title: Kant’s Transcendental and Metaphysical Idealism

Committee: Julie Klein (director), Dalia Nassar (University of Sydney), Paul Livingston (University of New Mexico)

Abstract: In this dissertation, I argue that the now-common understanding of Kant’s transcendental idealism, which holds that Kant displaces metaphysics with the more sober work of epistemology, overlooks the implicit metaphysical underpinnings of Kant’s supposedly metaphysically neutral epistemology. By reading Kant in the context of the Wolfian school in which he was trained, the continuity between transcendental idealism and rationalist metaphysics emerges. The proximity of Kant’s position to those of his rationalist predecessors, I argue, undermines interpretations of the former that take transcendental idealism to be merely a propaedeutic to metaphysical investigations. More specifically, I show that Kant’s transcendental idealism depends upon two principles central to the rationalist metaphysical tradition: (1) a metaphysical exceptionalism that identifies subjectivity as the ground of a distinct form of activity found nowhere outside of the thinking subject, and (2) an opposition between the ahistorical nature of logical form and the pure concepts of the understanding and the historical objects of whose intelligibility they condition.
